Yesterday, in spite of the bad weather, which rendered their mission particularly difficult, our air squadrons carried out many raids, and bombarded the aviation grounds of Colmar and Habsheim. All objectives were hit.

Thursday.—Army Group of Crown Princ Rupprecht.—Unfavourable sighting condition hindered the development of lively firm activity until the afternoon, and it was on during the evening that the artillery duel in Flanders again increased. It remained violent by night, and in some sectors it attained the greatest intensity, especially on the coast and from Bixschoote to Hollebeke. Infantry did not attack. An English reconnoitring detachment advancing near Hooge was repulsed. In Artois the fire increased on both sides of Lens. Here also recommissances made by the execution.

GENERAL OPPOSITION. The procedure at the Labour Conference to-day on the proposal to send British dele-gates to an International Conference at Stock-holm will be as follows:— A motion authorising the sending of British delegates will afterwards be moved by Mr. Robinson, of the Textile Workers and seconded by Mr. Carter, of the Miners.

A discussion will then be opened, and will be continued till one o'clock, when there will be an adjournment till 3 o'clock to enable the sections to hold separate meetings if desired. It is expected that the vote will be taken at

> BRITISH WORKERS' PROTEST.

A national demonstration was held at the central Hall, Westminster, last evening to lenounce the proposal that British delegates hould meet the Huns in friendly conference t Stockholm.

National Seamen's and Firemen's Union, presided.

Mr. G. M. Barnes, M.P., Minister of Pensions, wrote:—"I am entirely with you as to the inadvisability of the Stockholm Conference. I object to it because it is contrary to previous declarations of labour, and because no good cause had been made for departing from such previous declarations. It is singularly ill-timed, inasmuch as talk of peace terms with the enemy just now is calculated to weaken Russia and dishearten those who are so magnificently trying to pull her together. And, further, our taking part in such a conference would be a positive affront to our Allies in France, Italy, Belgium, and America. We should be choosing the enemy rather than our friends."

Mr. G. H. Roberts, M.P., and Mr. Clem Edwards also wrote in opposition.

In the region to the north-west of Sipot and Katergali, the enemy, after obstinate attacks, occupied the heights, forcing back our troops a little to the east. Between the rivulets Slucza and Dostiana, a number of attacks by the enemy were beaten off. The enemy succeeded in penetrating our trenches on one of the heights, but he was ejected in a counter-attack, and, this retirement on his part developing into a flight, we captured eight prisoners and a machine gun, which Ensign Samolin immediately turned on the fleeing enemy.

After artillery preparation, the enemy attacked positions in the region between the Rivers Oitor and Kasino, and in certain districts pressed back some of them. An attack to the south of the River Kasino was repulsed by the Rumanians. In the direction of Focsani the enemy continued to make attacks on both sides of the Focsani-Mercehostchi railway, and pressed back our troops to the north, between Petrechkani and Doalga.

The Chairman axid that pacifists talked as though they were the only people in the world who wanted peace. That was not so. The country wanted lasting peace, not one which would mean another war in ten years. The people of British were determined that there should be only one conclusion to the war.

Great enthusiasm was aroused when the Chairman, referring to the action of the seamen and firemen, said—"Whatever the Labour Conference, or any other Conference, may decide to morrow, or at any time, the seafaring men will absolutely decline to carry any peace delegates."

The Secretary (Mr. Henry W. Allen) read the notice convening the meeting and the report of the auditors.

The Chairman—Ladies and gentlemen, I am secret have to tell you that again this year Senatore Marconi is unable to preside over the meeting. He asks me to tell you how much he regrets his enforced absence. These are very strenuous times, and the services he is called upon to render in the interests of Italy, and the consequently of all the Allies, will, I am sure, be accepted by you as a very full and sufficient reason for his absence.

The report and accounts are before you, and I, therefore, propose, with your consent, to take them as read. If you will turn to the balances sheet, you will see the capital account has undergone no change during the past year. There is a slight variation in bills payable, and the property of the great of this payable, and the property of the great increase of the golden of the year, if is now represented by the round sure of the payable, and I therefore, propose, with your consent, to take them as read. If you will turn to the balances there, you will see the capital account that year. With an additional amount which is being placed to the credit of this account this year, if is now represented by the round sure of the year, and I think you will agree that it is an anchievement of which we may well be proud. THE CONVENTION.

In a leading article on the useful and hopeful progress of the Convention, the Duly Chronice says:—The Convention took the first and a very important step to ensure that its discussions shall go forward on a business-like programme, which should enable all sides to have their views and proposals duly appreciated, and to appreciate those of others. What is specially satisfactory is the note of unaimity and good feeling at the start, a note emphasised by the action of the municipalities of Belfast and Cork, both of which have offered hospitality to all the members of the Convention.

Inasmuch, however, as five years have already gone by the matter is ancient history, and I did not think that there was any good purpose to be served for the company or, perhaps, for the country in re-opening it, no matter what satisfaction I should have derived personally from doing so. I had decided to ask the shareholders to express their own views as to whether they desired or not that they should hear me upon the subject. The circular issued, however, by Mr. Hamilton, to my mind, does not leave it optional, but makes it necessary, for me, in their interests, to deal with the transaction me itself.
